Product information, including uses/applications and source(s) of imports:

Basketballs have covers made of different materials—namely, leather, rubber, or various man-made materials. All basketballs have a core composed of a butyl, natural, or combination rubber bladder (with molded inflation valve) that is subsequently wound with a polyester or nylon material to protect it and maintain its shape. A partially cured rubber carcass consisting of two half shells is placed over the wound core and cured under pressure in a hot mold. The carcasses for the subject leather basketballs are formed in molds that produce a smooth, black, round surface with raised ridges that provide channels for the cover material. Die-cut leather panels are then affixed with glue and hand-assembled into the channels so that a high pressure molding process ensures a tight bond of the leather cover materials to the carcass. Leather-covered basketballs are primarily designed for indoor use. Basketballs are typically produced in “youth,” “intermediate,” and “official” sizes.

China is the dominant import source and accounted for 85 percent of U.S. imports of basketballs in 2008, followed by Thailand (9 percent). Imports entering free of duty under the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) accounted for 4 percent of total U.S. imports in 2008, with nearly all GSP imports entering from Thailand. Separate data are not available for imports of basketballs by type of cover material.
